Business High School Pupils to Have a Thorough Course.

AFTER PRACTICAL RESULTS

Teaching the Future Captains of Industry.

NEW PRODUCTS LABORATORY

Boys Will Be Instructed About the Country's Resources-Girls Will Be Shown Ways of Business.

Two big educational courses, of unique features of the year at Business High School, beginning with the day the doors open and the pupils enter the brand-new banking building, which the board of education has provided, and enroll themselves in the new "school for captains of industry" as the new "products laboratory"

Furthermore, the Business High School intends this year to prove that woman bankers are as good in business as are the young man bankers. Allen Davis, the Dickens' Dora gone to the Business High Dora's day is dead and remains a delicious thing to read of in "David Copperfield," while the modern Washington girl, if she starts to go to the Business High School this month, will be turned out an adept in banking. She will have been perhaps a bank president, a bank 'runner." a cashier, a teller, a counter of specie or a note teller. She will have discounted notes and arranged to open big accounts On the other side of the counter she will have conducted a mercantile business, she will have opened accounts and will have drawn checks. When she steps up to the leading citizen on graduation day to receive her diploma she will be able to go from the graduation exercise into a bank and start there with almost any job that the president is willing

Girls Bright in Banking.

Are the girls of Washington going to be good bankers and bank clerks? Mr. Davis says this about them:

"I find that girls are brighter in the banking business at school than the boys. They are snappier as a rule, and follow the details with a remarkable aptittude. They stick by a problem until the end-but they lack the initiative of men." Mr. Davis says that if they had but the initiative, and the power to take advantage of small things at critical times they would outclass the men bank-

To teach the girls banking, along with the boys, a new bank has been installed in the Business High School. W. V. Cox, president of the board of education, and a banker, has given special attention to this new feature. He even went over the details of the drawings before the fixtures were installed, and went so far as to recommend exactly what kind of grille should be used so that the young lady bankers and others could look through it for several hours at a time without getting "woozy." This banking course and the privilege of opening accounts is reserved in most part for the pupils of the four-year course. The first part of the course will show the girls who want to be bankers more about the depositing side of the business, but after they have becom adepts at that and at other business instruction they will be taken into the banking community and become fullfledged school bankers and bank em

Real estate will be sold, wholesale and business established, importing houses will flourish, and in every one of them the new style of instruction for women will result in finding a Business High School girl taking her roll-top-desk part along with the young men. When the banking course is in full swing the Business High School enrollment takes Service Inaugurated to Pennon the attitude of a complete little Wall street, with a hundred Hetty Greens.

Future Captains of Industry.

Of great value to the young man entering business four years from now will be the "school for captains of industry." This term is not the one given it by the school officials, but it aptly describes the course of instruction. This course includes the instruction in the new "products laboratory," and is merely a start, and according to Principal Davis is "not a patch on what it will be in a few men and women are going to be taught everything possible about the products of the country in just the way that will help them when they go out to look for a job. In this course the Galt prize of $50 will be divided between two pupils of the school yearly. The young aspiring captains of industry will work up an exhibit in this products laboratory which Principal Davis says is going to surpass anything at the "Those exhibits," he says. "are dead. They are the same today, yesterday and forever. What our boys are going to do is to have a live exhibit that is constantly up to the minute. They are going to take sugar, for instance, and learn how it is grown, made and sold. They will know where the sugar mills are, and "They will know where to go if they want to embark in the iron mines business. They will know about mines, in a general way, and will know the processes of making the metal from the ore. They in the commercial world today.

"They will be able to take a shoe and tear it to pieces and tell how and why it was made as it is. We have already a splendid leather exhibit, and the boys will be leather experts. They will know where the corn comes from, and where it is sold, and what affects prices. Perhaps the knowledge gained in this course will enable some future captain of industry to become a corn king, and give the credit to the Business High School here.
"Cotton is going to play a big part in the course. The commercial geography which is designed for the boys this year will show them the location of the cotton fields. They will learn how the cotton is baled, and why it is baled, and how it is sold, and for what price, and how it increases in value as it goes through the mills in various forms, from canvas to lace. You can see that the world of injustry is going to be laid open, in primer form of course, for the Business High School students this year.'

This active school will have 1,100 students, it is estimated-almost as many as the Central High School will have-and the sanguine members of the faculty believe it will have just as many as the Central. Its new building will be run on full time this year. This addition was completed in the last half of the past school year, but was not used as extensively as it will be this year. In addition to the equipment for the bank and the "products laboratory," eighty new typewriters have been installed.
Of this school Supt. Stuart said last

"It is one school where every graduate walks into a business house and gets a position. It is a type of the modern idea of training boys and girls to be useful, to have a vocation and to know something besides purely academic subjects." The police at Lynchburg, Va., have inaugurated a crusade against the sale of cigarettes to boys under sixteen years of age. Four places were included in the first report. For a long time the law has been openly-disregarded.
